Class Description
This course is about group dynamics within and between groups. I will teach the course from an interdisciplinary, social psychological perspective. I will assume that students already have a background in social psychology, since either Psych 280 or Soc 305 are prerequisites for this course. The course will consist of lectures, reading assignments, quizzes, exams, and an optional extra credit opportunity. There will be no term papers. Participation in class will be encouraged, but not graded.

Textbooks and Reading Assignments
Readings will come from one required textbook, plus a number of articles on e-Reserve. The textbook is:

Blackboard Quizzes
There will be 17 Blackboard quizzes (one for each chapter of the textbook). See Blackboard for availability and due dates. These quizzes are “take-home” and “open book.” No make-up quizzes will be allowed. In total, these quizzes will be worth 30 points, approximately 20% of your final course grade.

Exams
There will be 4 exams, worth 30 points each. These exams are “closed book” exams, and they will take place in a proctored Testing Center (room 60 Carver Hall or 2552 Gillman). Each exam will consist of multiple choice, true/false, short answer, or essay questions. If a student misses an exam, he/she will be allowed to take a comprehensive make-up essay exam during finals week. No other make-up exams will be offered.

Grading
The final class grade will be based on the sum of the 17 quizzes and 4 exams. Grading will be follow a standard grading scale, 100-90% for A range, 89-80% for B range, etc. See the homepage for a more detailed grading scale.

Extra Credit
Students may earn 10 extra credit points by finding a relevant journal article and presenting this information to the class. See a detailed description of this extra credit opportunity on Blackboard. Also, extra credit points may occasionally be given for attendance.
